Conway started working at both ends early this morning to clear away the wreckage.

One empty gondola car skid-ded over an embankment and down into Jethro Hollow about 60 feet from the tracks. An oil tanker rolled over the edge of the embankment, a third car turned sideways across both tracks and the other five, four of them boxcars, remained upright on the right-of-way.

The cause of the derailment has not been determined. One railroad official said the damage is not expected to be high because most of the cars were empty. Wheels were torn from beneath all the cars. The 115-car freight was en route from Conway to Columbus. After the derailment, the front section was taken on through to Columbus and the other cars were returned to Conway. The the rear of a house.

of the cans were damaged. No one was injured. It was the second major derailment within the city limits this year. Early this summer, several cars derailed at the Myrtle St. crossing in Klondyke with the cars tearing up both lines and smashing into

Today's Statemen-Physicists

The apparent ease with which the United -States and the Soviet Union reached agreement on a cooperative program of nuclear research can be compared with the difficulty of reaching agreement on political issues.

The comparison suggests that the most important development of our era may be the emergency of statesmen-physicists whose decisions, starting with that famous formula scribbled by Albert Einstein, now rule the destiny of mankind.

These men-and women-have the knowledge and the concepts that are shaping the world in the atomic era. They have been under the thumbs of politicians and militarists and must continue to be subject to that control as long as hey are working on government projects. But they have demonstrated, beginning with the A-bomb project in this country, that what lies under their thumbs is the destiny of mankind, including politicians and militarists.

It has been pointed out endlessly that their studies and thoughts cannot be confined within national boundaries. What they already know and what all of them are trying to discover is international in scope; more than that, it is interspatial.

IT CAN BE RECALLED in this connection that the A-bomb secrets sent out of this country by Klaus Fuchs were not concerned with the knowledge of nuclear fission but with the triggering device that made it possible for the United States to use the bomb. The knowledge of the fission phenomenon had been shared by every nuclear physicist in the world for decades.

There is no barrier that can keep such things from being shared. Scientists have a common identity and a continuing community of interest that makes them international neighbors, without regards to quarrels among governments.

This is true to the extent that the only predictable effect of trying to live in scientific isolation would be a progressive state of ignorance, because science nourishes itself by contact with science.

Yet, obvious as these things are, there will be strong objection to any program of cooperative research with the Soviet Union.

The idea that the United States, which got its own knowledge of atomic fission from non-American scientists, should throw a wall around its own scientists will die hard.

THERE ALWAYS has been strong support in this country for the notion that if people are forbidden to talk about what is generally known no one will know anything about it. Countless times the government has muddled its communications by suppressing information available from its own Bureau of Publications for 25 cents.

John A. McCone, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, has taken a bold step by signing an agreement whose ultimate effect might be to create more confidence between nuclear physicists on both sides of the Iron Curtain than is likely to be created in the lifetimes of politicians and generals, who seek differences instead of similarities.

In science, there is one truth-only one. In politics, there are merely opinions.

Cranberry Habit Was Breakable

Thanksgiving dinner this year was enjoyed without cranberries in many households, including the White House in Washington. Americans proved they could eat cranberries or let 'em alone.

Even though many more cranberries would have been eaten had more cranberries been available in food stores, the ease with which the country survived its traditional turkey feast without the traditional tartness of cranberries to whet its appetite is a matter of

It coincided with another matter of special note-an explicit warning by U.S. Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney that cigarette smoking is associated with an increased chance of developing lung cancer and that smoking in general is the principal factor causing an increased incidence of lung cancer in the United States

This surprisingly strong statement by the U.S. surgeon general must be compared with the relatively mild statement by the secretary health, education and welfare, Arthur S. Flemming, that cranberries containing traces of a weed poison were suspect because the same poison had caused cancer in the thyroid glands of laboratory rats.

Things Christmas Can Do Without

On the whole, the Christmas season is one of giving. But, unfortunately, it also is one of "taking".

Each year there are thefts by unthinking people which mar the holiday.

The big community tree in the Diamond is a case at point. Last year it virtually was stripped of the many lights that made it a thing of beauty. A lot of hard work goes into the planning and erection of the tree each year. It is symbolic of the community's Christmas spirit. The symbol becomes somewhat dulled; however, when the tree itself is made the target of thieving the Salvation Army or some other source instead. Stealing lights from the community tree is not the proper way to go about making Christmas merry.

Another undesirable character who invariably makes an appearance during this time of the year is the one who seems to take fiendish delight in chopping down pine trees on private property and hauling them away for his own personal use.

The holiday season gives no one the authority to disregard the rights of others. Regardless of circumstances, stealing is stealing, whether it be from the tree in the Diamond or from private property.

It would be a credit to the community if such thefts fail to become a part of the Christmas story this year.

In the United States, a Col. Alexander Hogeland of Nebraska, is credited as the "father of the curfew law.

Hogeland was said to have introduced the first ordinance in Omaha in 1880 to keep youngsters from hanging around steamboat landings, rail stations and low variety shows.

Varying rules date back more than 50 years in Cleveland, Hot

Authorities point out that modern-day youth problems are much more difficult because now "the kids are on wheels." They go tearing about the countryside in cars -sometimes stolen ones.

The reference was to the young gangs of New York City, where 11 youthful slayings have occurred on the streets since the first of the year. New York has no curfew. There has been some talk of establishing one but the ruling fathers appear to favor tighter police surveillance of the streets instead.

BUT WITHOUT American aid Laos probably would collapse overnight and fall to the Communists who are waging guerrilla warfare to overthrow the pro-Western government.

Since 1955 the United States has poured 165 million dollars into the tiny Buddhist nation nestled in the heart of Southeast Asia flanked by Red China and Communist North Vietnam.

About 60 per cent of this money has gone toward military support. In addition, a secret amount of military equipment has been shipped in for the army, raising the over-all total of American aid to an estimated 225 million dollars.

"Even with this aid it is difficult to see how the little kingdom can ever be self-sufficient." says Willard O. Brown, deputy director of the American mission. "But our end purpose here is to develop Laos at least more toward the point of being able to support it-

Eisenhower's Trip

By James Marlow

What Will The Impact Be On The President?

WASHINGTON The most important result of President Eisenhower's journey to 11 nations, starting Thursday, may not be the impression he makes on them but their impact on him.

When he returns around Christmas he may have become convinced some changes in American foreign policy are needed. It should be remembered Eisenhower is in a new phase of his presidency.

He is more flexible, more active. and perhaps more impressionable in foreign affairs than at any time of his White House tenancy up to

He will make 30 talks. He will get the red carpet treatment everywhere. He may create better understanding for America, as he says he hopes to do. But he will also be getting a better understanding of some of the nations he visits - all friendly, some allied, but some neutralfor he will be seeing them closeup for the first time since becoming president. Until now he has had to depend for insights into these countries and his knowledge of their needs and predicaments on second-hand information - their diplomsyd, or American study

Even a year ago, when Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was so completely dominating American foreign policy, a trip like this by Eisenhower might have had no more than ceremonial significance.

But with Dulles' death last spring Eisenhower took over active direction of foreign policy. He became more flexible and apparently more receptive to new ideas as he sought to cope with Premie- Nikita Khrushchev.

The result has been a feeling that American foreign policy now is capable of change. Previously it had appeared frozen. For example: not long ago Eisenhower was telling friends he was opposed to the meeting of heads of state to settle problems He preferred, he said, the oldfashioned method of letting foreign secretaries do it. Since then he made a quick tour of Western Europe, had Khrushchev here, is going to visit him. is making this journey now, will hold a pre-summit meeting Dec. 19 and will later go to a summit conference.

Eisenhower still has a little more than 13 months left in office. It will crown his double career as general-president if, in the time left him in the White House he can initiate, fight for and perhaps push through new ideas or programs which will make the international climate safer for America or safer for everyone.

It would have political value here at home, too, for his own Republican party in the 1960 presidential election.

He will see first-hand not only some of the dilemmas of the countries he visits-social, economic and military-but some of the contradictions in a world dominated by the United States and the Soviet Union.

For example: two nations under the shadow of the U.S.S.R. One is Afghanistan, staying neutral but getting more aid from the Soviets than from this country.

Then there is India, whose vast problems can hardly be imagined here, where Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, despite all his efforts to stay above the East-West strife, just got a bloody nose from Red China.

The Course Of Trade

By Sam Dawson

President Eisenhower's visit in Europe, Asia and Africa will be stealing the headlines. But don't forget he can - and probably will - talk trade on that trip as well as international politics and alignments.

And at home the next four or five weeks will have a lot to do with setting the course of trade, industry, finance, stock prices and therefore jobs and incomes - in the first half of 1960.

What happens along these lines also will have a bearing on the success of the President's trip: The economic status of the United States - along with the strength of the American dollar - has much to do with the tone of thinking and planning in other lands. It is a powerful factor in determining decisions in politics as well as trade.

If you own stocks, or would like to, you'll be watching along with the experts to see if the traditional year-end rally develops in security markets. Although seasonal factors influence it, such a rally usually is interpreted as reflecting confidence in business in general for the months just ahead.

Management and labor - and everyone else - will be watching closely for any break in the deadlock in thinking on such things as featherbedding; factory rules, just how much of a wage increase would it take to set off another inflationary price spiral. This better in December how fast the steel industry can get finished products into their hands, how much rebuilding of inventory (and when) can be expected. And as the auto companies approach full output again, everyone in and out of the industry will be watching for the postponed race between the new compact cars, and between American and foreign autos. A big sales year for Detroit would give the economy a decisive boost.

How consumers feel in general about spending - and that's the really big item in the economy that sets good times or bad may show clearly in the next four weeks. If they have confidence in the business outlook, and especially in their own income prospects, and spend freely between now and Christmas, both merchants and manufacturers will look for a good first half of the year. Ir the next few days the federal budget will take final shape. Soon we will know how much the government wants to spend in the next fiscal year, how much of a needle that will be for business. And we will know if the government thinks it can make such expenditures within its anticipated

If not, there'll be the threat of higher taxes. Or there will be the threat of more inflationary pressure to keep prices on the climb tax collections.

Steel Expects Output Mark

CLEVELAND (AP)-Steel Magazine today predicted a record production for December by the nation's steelmakers and said the output may hit a new all-time monthly mark.

Average steel mill operations next month of 90 per cent of rated capacity, which the magazine said is expected to be the minimum, will mean production of 11.3 million tons compared with the present December record of 10.8 million tons set in 1956.

"If operations average 93 per cent or higher in December, production will set an all-time monthly record, surpassing last May's 11.6 million tons," the metalworking weekly said.

Steelmakers last week boosted their operations to 88 per cent of rated capacity, 9.1 points higher than the previous week's revised rate. Production of 2,402,000 ingot tons pushed the total for the first 11 months this year to about 81 millions tons.

Signal Post Office To Close Tuesday As Economy Move

The Signal Post Office, which has been in operation 79 years, will be closed Tuesday as an economy measure by the Postal Department. Residents of the area will be served from the Lisbon Post

Mrs. Thelma Powell, postmaster, said she had been notified that all fourth class post offices are being closed where possible. Mrs. Powell has served as postmaster since 1951. She was named to succeed Mrs. Nellie Noel who served five years after replacing Mrs. Erma Wonsetler.

The Post Office is located in a building that was a general store. The business closed several years ago but the Post Office remained. The Post Office was set up in 1880. It was first called Oakville but the name was changed to avoid confusion with another of the same name.
